

A word about Invisible Fences...

🐾 If there is a power failure, your invisible fence becomes useless during that time. Therefore, if you live in an area that experiences frequent storms & power outages, you may want to reconsider installing an invisible fence.

🐾 Under the right conditions, a panicked dog could run through the boundary, then be hesitant to come back through the barrier.

🐾 An invisible fence may keep your dog IN the yard, but it doesn't keep other dogs or wild animals OUT. So, there's always a chance that your dog could be attacked or get in a fight with another dog or animal inside the boundaries of your invisible fence. (Such is why your dog should always be supervised even in a yard protected by an invisible fence.)

🐾 Some dogs have a high pain threshold and will go through the barrier if the distraction is strong enough. Once they go through, they receive the correction when trying to re-enter the yard and may be reluctant to return when the chase is done.
